

The Best Advice I Ever Got
Fortune Magazine, March 21, 2005

You're right not because others agree with you, but because your facts are right—Warren Buffet.

Make a fool of yourself. Otherwise you won't survive—Richard Branson.

Recognize the skills and traits you don't possess, and hire people who have them—Howard Schultz.

Have the courage to stick with a tough job—A.G. Lafley.

Follow your own instincts, not those of people who see the world differently—Sumner Redstone.

Be nice, do your best, and most important, keep it in perspective—meg Whitman.

Be yourself—Jack Welch.

Don't listen to the naysayers—Sallie Krawcheck.

Don't limit yourself by past expectations—Vivek Paul.

When you negotiate, leave a little on the table—Dick Parsons.

When "everyone knows" something to be true, nobody knows nothin'—Andy Grove.

Remember the parable of the cow in the ditch—Anne Mulcahy.

All you really own are ideas and the confidence to write them down—Brian Glazer.

Regularly sit at the feet of Peter Drucker—Rick Warren.

The real discipline comes in saying no to the wrong opportunities—Jim Collins.

Get good or get out—Peter Drucker.

Start young—Ted Turner.

Balance your work with your family—David Neeleman.

Bail out of a business that isn't growing—Mickey Drexler.

Let others take the credit—Brian Roberts, Jr.

Incorporate philanthropy into your corporate structure—Marc Benioff.

Surround yourself with people of integrity, and get out of their way—Hector Ruiz.

If you love something, the money will come—Donny Deutsch.

Keenly visualize the future—Klasu Kleinfeld.

Don't chart your career path too soon—Ann Fudge.

Respect people for who they are, not for what their titles are—Herb Kelleher.

You can learn from anyone—Clayton Christiansen.

Do what you love—Ted Koppel.